

Transformation Post-COVID-19

Partitions of every size and shape will be researched to help redesign office layouts to minimize potentially dangerous interactions without cutting off communication.

The challenge will be balancing new safety measures with opportunities for productive interactions. For at the end of the day, many businesses are realizing that the only reason to be in the office is to collaborate.

A good article, "How workplaces will be transformed in the wake of COVID-19", highlights thoughts from Kay Sargent, director of workplace strategy at HOK, about what organizations and communicators must consider when reinventing their workplaces in response to COVID-19.

As business looks to reopen, social distancing rules will lead to a heightened need to effectively divide space and de-densify the workplace environment.

Communal Repositories for Trash & Recycle

With a variety of configurations available, two, three or four bins that are designated shapes for the disposal of materials or circular grommet openings to bi-directional door flaps on a standard base or casters for mobility.

“Remove trash cans and recycle bins from individual work points and replace them with communal repositories in a communal location to consolidate sanitation and exposure.” (12)

“FFE (furniture, fixtures and equipment) and material specifications are being reviewed to include anti-microbial treatments and bleach cleanable.” (15)

We offer antimicrobial laminates, copper-infused laminate and solid-surfaces, solid-surface, or phenolic material options.

We take every precaution possible to ensure the safety and well-being of our valued employees.

Hamilton Space Divider

One way we can help divide space using materials that can be bleach cleaned for disinfecting are our Panel Dividers. Made from laminate and aluminum extrusions, these portable space dividers are easy to move, divide space, and are affordable.

“Install hard surface dividers between work points to help define work points and add dividers, such as mobile markerboards, screens, planters, lockers or cabinets within the open space to increase shielding.” (18)

Delineation of Space Solutions : Space Dividers & Locker Wall Partitions

Locker Wall Partition

Creating a full-height or counter-top-height locker storage wall partition can help break up space while keeping the vibe of an open office. Our lockers come in a wide variety of sizes, configurations, laminate choices (including anti-microbial) and locks. Even RFID locks, making our lockers practically touchless. Employees can open their locker with their badge, phone and even wearable.

“Assign lockers, file drawers or storage cabinets to individuals to store personal items. Leverage electronic, hands-free locking mechanisms.” (10)
